Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-10 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).
4. Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yamada et al in view of Uehara et al.

Yamada et al discloses a recording/reproducing apparatus that shows substantially the same limitations recited in claims 1, 4, 7, and 10, including the feature of having a plural set of image data recorded on a recording medium and thumbnail images of selected representative images being also recorded on the recording medium as specified in the present claims 1, 4, 7, and 10. (See Yamada et al's claim 49, last paragraph, section (ii), where it is disclosed thumbnail information including information pertaining to a plurality of representative images of the image files being recorded on the recording medium).

Yamada et al fails to specifically disclose the feature of attaching thumbnail images of the representative images to the surface of the storage medium disk as specified in the present claims 1, 4, 7, and 10.

Uehara et al a video content browsing apparatus which includes the capability of attaching thumbnail images (image index) to a storage medium as specified in the present claims 1, 4, 7, and 10.

It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to modify the Yamada et al's apparatus wherein the storage recording means provided thereof would incorporate the capability of attaching thumbnail images to the storage medium in the same conventional manner as shown by Uehara et al. The motivation is to make the summary of the recorded content information on the storage medium available to the user by looking at the storage medium as suggested by Uehara et al.

With regard to claims 2-3, 5-6, 8-9, the feature of selecting the representative image data based on predetermined data or degree of similarity of the set of image data as specified thereof would be inherently present in the cited reference of Yamada et al's apparatus. Because, the Yamada et al's reference discloses that the user has the capability of selecting representative data as desired as shown in Figures 2, and 3, of Yamada et al. Therefore, the user can always look for similarity of the image data in selecting the representative image data as desired.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

5. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

6. Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claim is directed to a recording medium storing nonfunctional descriptive material.

Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer-readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are neither physical “things” nor statutory processes. See, e.g. Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory) and merely claiming nonfunctional descriptive material stored in a computer-readable medium does not make it statutory. See MPEP 2106.IV.B.1.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Wurz et al discloses a method of indexing and printing user specified frames during playback or contemporaneous video recording.
